The book "Bangladesh: Suffering People Under State Terrorism" is a shocking exposé of the human rights abuses that have become commonplace in Bangladesh. Written by a team of leading Bangladeshi human rights activists, the book documents the government's systematic use of torture, extrajudicial killings, and enforced disappearances to silence dissent and maintain its grip on power.

The book begins with a harrowing account of the torture and murder of blogger and activist Niloy Neel. In 2015, Neel was brutally hacked to death by machete-wielding assailants in broad daylight. His murder was one of a series of targeted killings of bloggers and activists who had criticized the government's authoritarian policies.

The book also documents the government's crackdown on freedom of expression. Journalists who have dared to criticize the government have been harassed, detained, and even tortured. In 2018, the government passed a draconian law that criminalizes "digital security" offenses, which has been used to target journalists and activists who use social media to criticize the government.

The government's campaign of repression has also targeted political opponents. In 2014, the main opposition leader, Khaleda Zia, was sentenced to five years in prison on corruption charges. Zia's imprisonment has effectively silenced the opposition and paved the way for Hasina to consolidate her power.

The book "Bangladesh: Suffering People Under State Terrorism" is a powerful indictment of the Hasina government's human rights record. The book provides a comprehensive overview of the government's abuses, and it offers a chilling glimpse into the lives of ordinary Bangladeshis who are living in fear of their own government.

The book is a must-read for anyone who is concerned about the state of human rights in Bangladesh. It is a powerful reminder of the importance of freedom of expression, democracy, and the rule of law.

Call to Action

We urge the international community to take action to stop the human rights abuses in Bangladesh. We call on the government of Bangladesh to:

- Release all political prisoners, including Khaleda Zia.
- End the crackdown on freedom of expression and allow journalists and activists to operate freely.
- Investigate all allegations of torture and extrajudicial killings and prosecute those responsible.
- Adopt measures to protect the rights of minorities and other vulnerable groups.

We also urge the international community to provide support to human rights defenders in Bangladesh and to monitor the human rights situation in the country.

Together, we can help to end the reign of terror in Bangladesh and build a more just and democratic future for all Bangladeshis.
