

The City After the Automobile: Reclaiming Our Public Spaces

By Jeff Speck

The City After the Automobile is a groundbreaking book that challenges the dominance of the automobile in our cities and offers a vision for a more sustainable, livable, and equitable future. Jeff Speck, a leading urban planner and transportation expert, argues that the automobile has become a major obstacle to the creation of healthy and thriving cities. He shows how cars have made our streets dangerous and polluted, have destroyed our public spaces, and have contributed to the decline of our economy.

Speck offers a comprehensive plan for reclaiming our public spaces from the automobile. He calls for reducing the number of cars on the road, making our streets more pedestrian-friendly, and investing in public transportation. He also proposes a number of innovative ideas for creating more livable and sustainable cities, such as building compact mixed-use developments, creating greenways and bike lanes, and establishing congestion pricing.

The City After the Automobile is a must-read for anyone who is interested in creating more livable, sustainable, and equitable cities. Speck's vision for a city after the automobile is a powerful and inspiring one, and his book provides a roadmap for how to achieve it.
